Receptive Language

Receptive language skills refer to the understanding of words (vocabulary), the understanding of language concepts, the understanding of conversation (connected speech) and the understanding of situations (pragmatics).

Our ability to understand and follow verbal information and instructions can be influenced by other factors e.g. memory difficulties, attention and listening differences.